Acknowledgments

This treatise is based on my experience teaching, writing and practicing air pollution for more than forty years. It represents my views on this subject in mid-2009. In producing this text I have been assisted by many people who have worked on the mechanics producing this book or have helped shape my views on air pollution law. For more than two decades, Ms. Winifred Hercules, legal secretary, worked on the air pollution materials that became books on air pollution. Ms. Germaine Leahy, Head of Reference at the George Washington University Law School supported my efforts. At the University of Utah, Ms. Angela Turnbow and Ms. Suzanne Faddis helped finish the manuscript. I am indebted to my many outstanding research assistants over the past 40 years. I also am indebted to the practicing lawyers who have helped educate me on air pollution. They include Julie Becker, David Deal, Stewart Drake, Lee Hoffman, Carol Holmes, Debra Jacobson, Edward Kussy, Michael McBride, Raymond Mushal, and many others. I am especially indebted to Andrew J. Harrison, Jr., who continuously challenges my knowledge of air pollution law, to my colleague at the University of Utah Law School James Holtkamp, and to Margaret and Michael Stern who generously share their many decades of experience in the electrical power field.
